OPENING COMMENTS:

- Thank you for coming. God brought you here. That's no accident.
- Say with me: "I wish we had more time." You will say that. You will feel like you have a fire hydrant in your mouth. Instead, think of it as an appetizer at a meal. This is Introduction, then you will go home to Implement, and then you will Multiply. JFYM is a PROCESS, and this is the beginning point.

INTRODUCE participants:

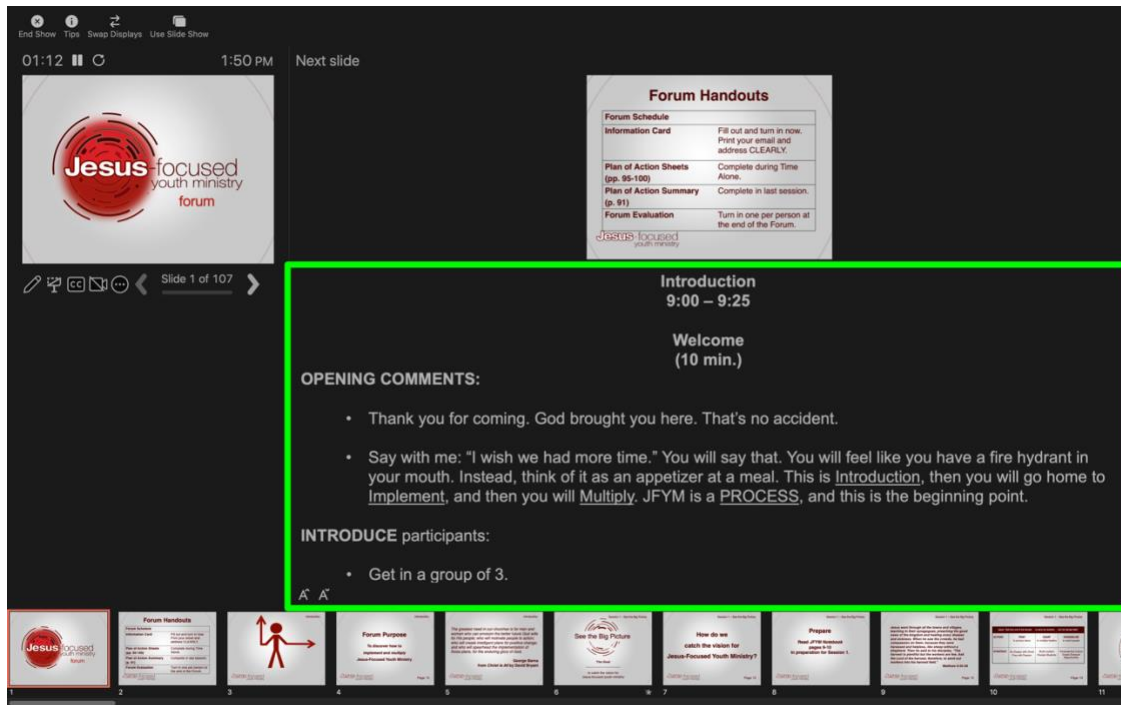

- Get in a group of 3.
- Tell one fact about yourself.
- Tell one fact about your family.

SEVEN HELPFUL FEATURES OF THE PRESENTER VIEW

1. On the left pane of this window the Presenter can see what the attendees will see.
2. Tools below the current slide allow the presenter to highlight an area of the slide, temporarily turn the slide to black, advance the slide or go backward in the presentation.
3. A ribbon of slides across the bottom reveals the progress of the presentation and highlights the current slide being viewed.
4. In the top right pane of this window the next slide in sequence is previewed for the presenter.
5. The lower pane on the right side displays the presenter's script.
6. Faint lines appear between each of the panes. By clicking and holding on either the vertical or horizontal dividing lines between the three panes, the presenter can increase or decrease the space for each of these areas.
7. In the lower portion of the notes pane, the presenter can select the A with the up arrow to increase the font size or the A with the down arrow to decrease the font size. (As shown below.)

By adjusting the sizes of individual panes and the size of the font, the presenter can make adjustments for viewing the notes for an optimal presentation.

To exit this view, you may click escape or click EXIT in the top left corner of the Presenter's window.
